Dear General Smith:

I am doing a research project on the Department of State's Russian-language publication, Amerika. Your three years' service as ambassador to Russia and your keen comments on conditions there make you a particularly valuable observer. The paragraphs concerning Amerika in your book have been most helpful. I will appreciate any additional evaluation of the magazine's effectiveness--in regard to both content and circulation--as an instrument of American influence in Russia that you might care to make. I am particularly interested in knowing how Amerika was distributed during your stay in Russia. Was it generally available on the newsstands, or did it circulate almost solely within the Soviet bureaucracy?

Thank you very much for any time you may find it possible to give to my queries.

Yours truly,

Walter S. Hanchett
